I understand that Mr. Hetu will be forwarding biographical information and other relative materials to me soon and I will work with him otherwise in the planning details. As soon as convenient I would appreciate being advised of your travel plans in order that appropriate arrangements can be made for your hotel accommodations.

Dear Admiral Turner:

I write at the suggestion of our mutual friend [redacted]
[redacted] who contacted you yesterday in my behalf.

The National Conference of Bar Presidents is composed of the presidents, president-elect and other past and present officers of state and local bar associations of this country. The NCBP meets twice annually in conjunction with the midyear and annual meetings of the American Bar Association for the purpose of providing a forum for the exchange of information among leaders of the organized bar. Also in attendance are representatives of the National Association of Bar Executives and other staff officials of state and local bar associations. Generally 200 to 300 bar leaders participate in each meeting.

STAT

Our annual meeting this year is in Dallas at the Hyatt Regency Hotel. I write to invite you to be our luncheon speaker at noon on the opening day of the meeting, August 10, 1979. Remarks of 20 to 30 minutes duration on a subject of your choice would be entirely appropriate. The speech you gave at Boca Raton to the American College of Trial Lawyers, however, would serve admirably. While I heard you there (you may recall I spoke to you briefly in the foyer after your presentation), there will be few others, if any, in the NCBP audience at Dallas who heard you at Boca Raton.

The National Conference of Bar Presidents technically is independent of the American Bar Association and is funded by the voluntary contributions of its membership. Thus, while it is a reputable and significant force in the organized bar, its resources are rather limited. We are unable therefore to offer an honorarium although we would expect to defray your travel, lodging and attendant expenses and would arrange your accommodations at the Hyatt Regency.

Of course you will be welcome to observe each day of the Conference proceedings and those of the ABA that follow immediately. However, we will understand should the demands upon your time require a quick trip to Dallas.

I do hope you will be able to accept. I think we can promise you a thoughtful, influential audience and I am sure you will be well received. In addition, I will have solved the damnable problem of presenting a first-class program to a group of demanding lawyers.

I would appreciate your response as soon as convenient.

With thanks and best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

Wm. Reece Smith, Jr.
